and if it was, I wish you might have been at the meeting at St. George's Church here, on the Sunday night before Labor day, at which meeting the same bishop presided, and when the great church was packed with men from all sorts of labor crafts; for I think that notwithstanding the old Creed was recited and something about the Virgin Mary, you would yet have found yourself in hearty sympathy with the meeting.

I think myself that more in very stirring times. I am more and more impressed with the deep righteousness of this great-city, and what a great deal of mire and dirt is being cast up, it seems much better to than to be saying 'Peace', when there is no peace.

I hope you will pay another visit to New York this season.

My Salutations to your house Yours most-Faithful
